Edited by ROBERT WARRIOR

The World of Indigenous North America

The World of Indigenous North America provides a comprehensive look at issues that concern Indigenous people in North America. Though no single volume can cover every Indigenous group and every issue around this fertile area of inquiry, this book takes on the fields of law, archaeology, literature, sociolinguistics, geography, sciences, and gender studies, among others, in order to make sense of the Indigenous experience. Broadly covering Canada's First Nations and Indigenous Mexico Native American tribes of the United States, and alluding to the work being done in Indigenous studies through the rest of the world, the volume reflects the critical mass of scholarship that has developed in Indigenous studies over the past decade, and highlights the best new work that is emerging in the field.

Robert Warrior (Osage) is Professor of American Indian Studies, History, and English at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign.

Chris Andersen is a citizen of the Métis Nation, from Saskatchewan (Canada) and is an Associate Professor in the Faculty of Native Studies at the University of Alberta. He is the Director of the Rupertsland Centre for Métis Research. From a research perspective, he is interested in the ways in which the Canadian nation-state has created “identity” categories relating to aboriginal communities and in particular the term “Métis.” With Evelyn Peters, he is a co-editor of the recently published “Indigenous in the City: Contemporary Identities and Cultural Innovation” (UBC Press). Finally he is the author an additional forthcoming book: Métis: Race, Recognition, and the Struggle for Indigenous Peoplehood.

Joanne Barker is a citizen of the Delaware Tribe of Indians (Lenape) of Bartlesville, Oklahoma. She is Associate Professor of American Indian Studies at San Francisco State University. She is the author of Native Acts: Law, Recognition, and Cultural Authenticity (Duke University Press, 2011) and editor of Sovereignty Matters: Locations of Contestation and Possibility in Indigenous Struggles for Self-Determination (University of Nebraska Press, 2005).

Duane Champagne (Turtle Mountain Band of Chippewa) is Professor of Sociology at the University of California, Los Angeles. His work concentrates on studies of social and cultural change and continuity among Indigenous nations. He is the author of Notes from the Center of Turtle Island (2010).

Matt Cohen is an Associate Professor in the Department of English at the University of Texas at Austin. He is the author of The Networked Wilderness: Communicating in Early New England (2010).

Charlotte Coté is Associate Professor of American Indian Studies at the University of Washington in Seattle, Washington. She is a member of the Tseshaht First Nation, one of the Nuu-chah-nulth groups on the west coast of Vancouver Island in British Columbia, Canada. She is the author of Spirits of our Whaling Ancestors: Revitalizing Makah and Nuu-chah-nulth Traditions (University of Washington Press, 2010) and is currently working on her next book, which explores Indigenous food practices and ecological knowledge.

Amy E. Den Ouden is a cultural anthropologist and Associate Professor in the Women's Studies Department at the University of Massachusetts Boston. She is the author of Beyond Conquest: Native Peoples and the Struggle for History in New England (2005) and co-editor, with Jean M. O'Brien, of Recognition, Sovereignty Struggles, and Indigenous Rights in the United States: A Sourcebook (2013). For over a decade, she worked as an oral history interviewer, archival researcher, and writer for the Eastern Pequot and Golden Hill Paugussett Tribal Nations' federal acknowledgment projects. She serves on the advisory board for First Peoples: New Directions in Indigenous Studies.

María Eugenia Cotera teaches in the Department of American Culture and the Women's Studies Department at the University of Michigan. Her work focuses on the intellectual legacies of women of color, with special attention to the contexts of knowledge production and decolonizing projects. Her book Native Speakers: Ella Deloria, Zora Neale Hurston, Jovita Gonzalez and the Poetics of Culture (UT Press, 2008) was awarded the 2009 Gloria Anzaldúa Prize from the National Association of Women's Studies.

Emilio del Valle Escalante (K'iche' Maya) is originally from Guatemala. He teaches at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. His research interests focus on contemporary Latin American literatures and cultural studies with particular emphasis on Indigenous literatures and social movements, Central American literatures and cultures, and post-colonial and subaltern studies theory in the Latin American context. His broader cultural and theoretical interests cluster around areas involving themes of colonialism as these relate to issues of nationhood, national identity, race/ethnicity, and gender. He is the author of Maya Nationalisms and Postcolonial Challenges in Guatemala: Coloniality, Modernity and Identity Politics (SAR, 2009; Spanish version by FLACSO, 2008), the editor of "Indigenous Literatures and Social Movements in Latin America" (a special issue of Latin American Indian Literatures Journal [spring 2008]) and U'k'ux kaj, u'k'ux ulew: Antología de poesía Maya guatemalteca contemporánea (IILI, 2010).

María Elena García is Associate Professor in the Comparative History of Ideas and the Jackson School of International Studies at the University of Washington. She received her Ph.D. in Anthropology at Brown University and has been a Mellon Fellow at Wesleyan University and Tufts University. Her first book, Making Indigenous Citizens: Identities, Development, and Multicultural Activism in Peru (Stanford, 2005), examines Indigenous
